Indianapolis, Indiana (January 21, 2010) – The Indiana Department of Correction (IDOC) is proud to congratulate Alan Chapman, Superintendent of the Henryville Correctional Facility, on recently receiving a very distinguished award.

On Monday, January 18, Chapman received the Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. Freedom and Justice Award at the 2010 King Holiday Events held by the City of Jeffersonville, Indiana. The award ceremony was held during a memorial march and service.

The award is given to recognize and affirm those persons who have made a significant contribution in the areas of race relations, justice, and/or human rights.

Chapman was nominated for the award by his staff, who praised his support of rehabilitative programming at the facility and his increased involvement with the community. He was also commended for being a positive role model and a good leader and for the activities he plans for the offender population to celebrate the Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. holiday.

“I am very proud to have Superintendent Chapman on the team, and I congratulate him on the superb job he continues to do, not only for the offender population he supervises, but also for the positive things he does for his staff members,” said IDOC Commissioner Edwin G. Buss.
